Participatory Budgeting has been expanding over the last 30 years, from one experience to over 3000 in 2017. Despite its huge contribution to participatory democracy and improvement of citizen's well being, PB has largely been unable to address gender inequality and modify men-women social relations patterns. This being said some experiences have been able to reach significant changes and to introduce innovative methodologies.

The event is structured into three main parts:

1. The first 80 minutes focus on how gender equity approaches were successfully inserted in PB processes in different cities of different scales
